Art Unit: 1616

5. The rejection of claims 1-13 and 21-25 under 35 USC 102(e) over Stewart et al. ('966) is withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

6. The rejection of claims 1-13 and 21-25 under 35 USC 103(a) over D'Amato et al. ('074), Clark et al. ('168), Fotsis et al. ('900) or Stewart ('966) is maintained.

Applicant argues that the skilled artisan does not recognize other steroids as contaminants or impurities in 2-methoxyestradiol compositions and thus, it cannot be assumed that the 2-methoxyestradiol of the cited references is pure. Applicant's argument is not persuasive for the following reasons.

Utilizing a pure form of any pharmaceutical agent in the medical art would be obvious to the skilled artisan because of the desire to reduce any adverse effect caused by contaminants. Obtaining a pure form of a steroid compound free of any contaminant, including other steroids, would be obvious to the skilled artisan because the skilled artisan would recognize that the terms "impurities" and "contaminants" are inclusive and, thus, refer to that which is not desired. The fact that the prior art recognizes the properties of other steroidal compounds does not imply that said compound(s) are not obtainable or desired in pure form. The fact remains that purer form of compounds useful as therapeutic agents are desired in the pharmaceutical art.

In addition, the data sheet from Sigma discloses the claimed compound can be obtained in pure form of a minimum of 98% purity as determined by HPLC. Said would imply that the compound which is 98-100% pure as determined by HPLC was obtainable by the method utilized by Sigma.

Applicant also stated that there are no references cited by the PTO that shows that steroid contaminants are absent. However, the references do not show that said steroid contaminants are present and, thus, based on the level of skill of the artisan in the pharmaceutical art, the ordinary artisan would have the reasonable expectation that the compound is in pure form.

For these reasons and those given in previous Office Actions, the rejection of claims 1-13 and 21-25 under 35 USC 103(a) over D'Amato et al. ('074), Clark et al. ('168), Fotsis et al. ('900) or Stewart ('966) is maintained.
